things which cost money.

C. J. Glidden didn't begin this life in a bed of roses, nor even in a silken lined cradle. He was an apt pupil in school until he left at the age of 15, convinced that it was up to him to get to earning money. He started in as messenger boy for the old Atlantic & Pacific Telegraph Co., manipulating a key whenever the operator would a key whenever the operator would let him practice. Soon he became an operator and then his earnings amounted to enough so that he could save the portion that was not given to his mother.

His rise was rapid because his work was earnest, and as he rose he saved. He established one of the first telethe established one of the first tele-phone exchanges ever operated in this country and the fortunate invest-ment of his early savings has made it possible for him to retire from active business in the prime of life and to gratify his particular desire, to travel; to visit 25 countries, cover-ing fully 50,000 miles with his auto-mobile, which is going some for mobile, which is going some for a man as youngeas he. The General says:

When we entered the field the price of good roofing was too high. With our big mills, enormous output and modern selling methods we can sell the best roofing at a reasonable price. This has been done to such a great extent that high prices have been killed. Now you get the highest quality at a reasonable price when you have
